"Dice" Alden, a gambler, who plays square and seldom loses, licks a couple of cheating gamblers and battles his way out of a border saloon. Alden rides across the border, and takes a room in Mary Bole's house. Mary is the daughter of a once prosperous rancher who is now almost broke because of his gambling ventures.

Fred Kendrick, a neighbor, has Mary's entry for the county sweepstakes race shoed badly. Alden tells him this and Kendrick resents it. They battle and Alden licks him.

Meanwhile Mary's father borrowed $500. on his property which he soon loses in cards across the border. Returning home he steals his daughter's savings and makes another attempt to win. Alden suspects what is to happen and rides to the gambling resort. He enters the game and breaks it, after an hour of careful playing.

On the way home he is attacked and robbed. Making his way home, he is suspected by Mary but pleads innocent, then rides away, across the border. Mary's father confesses. She rides to see Alden and he enters the race.

After a hard race he wins, saves the ranch and Mary confesses her love for him. He tells her she means more than gambling to him and he takes the pledge as he embraces her.
